

CONTRIBUTORS

- Ruth Bone studied botany at the University of Edinburgh and Trinity College Dublin. She is currently based at Kew where she is a member of the content team for the e-taxonomy project eMonocot. E-mail: r.bone@kew.org.
- Sharon Bradley is a botanical artist who teaches at the Royal Botanic Garden, Edinburgh, and has been closely associated with the Meconopsis group. Address: c/o R.B.G. Edinburgh, 20A Inverleith Row, Edinburgh, EH3 5LR.
- David Goyder is a botanist in the herbarium at Kew. he specialises in South American Asclepiads and has recently made several collecting expeditions to Mozambique. E-mail: d.goyder@kew.org
- Christopher Grey-Wilson is a botanist with special interests in The Meconopsis, Clematis, Pulsatilla, Cyclamen, and Impatiens. Until recently he was editor of the Alpine Garden Society, and was formerly editor of Kew Magazine. E-mail: c.grey-wilson@talk21.com
- Pat Griggs is Specialist Training Co-ordinator and UKOTs Public Engagement Officer: UKOTs and Conservation Team. E-mail: p.griggs@kew.org
- Ray Harley is a specialist in the Labiatae. He was formerly on the staff at Kew, and now divides his time between Kew and South America. E-mail: r.harley@kew.org
- Nicholas Hind is a botanist in the Herbarium at Kew and has been Head of Compositae research, and a member of the Tropical American Regional Team, since 1994. His main interests are in the New World and he specialises in Brazilian and Bolivian Compositae. He is currently involved in several flora projects, including the Flora of São Paulo and Flora Zambesiaca. E-mail: n.hind@kew.org
- Christabel King is a botanical illustrator whose work appears frequently in Curtis's Botanical Magazine, of which she is also an editorial board member. She teaches Botanical Illustration in London, Istanbul and in other parts of the world. She has prepared many of the illustrations for the associated series of Botanical Magazine Monographs and is currently working on paintings for monographs of Cyclamen, Rosa and Iris. E-mail: c.king@kew.org
- Sheila Mannes-Abbott is a freelance botanical artist, illustrator and teacher, with a special interest in the genus Iris. E-mail: www.botanicalartist.co.uk
- Mark Nesbitt is the curator of the Economic Botany collection at Kew. He spent 15 years studying crop domestication and the history of farming in the Near East. His research interests include the history of Kew and empire, 19th century materia medica, and the development of museums. E-mail: m.nesbitt@kew.org
- Lynn Parker works on the illustrations collections in the Library, Art and Archives department at Kew. E-mail: l.parker@kew.org
- David W. H. Rankin was Professor of Structural Chemistry at the University of Edinburgh. He has a particular interest in the way plants react to metals in different soils, and studies the growth of Rhododendron and other genera on

- limestone soils in the wild. He is also a specialist in the genera Primula and Meconopsis. E-mail: D.W.H.Rankin@ed.ac.uk
- Alison Rix was assistant editor at the Royal Horticultural Society: she has been editor of the International Dendrology Society, and has an MA in Garden History from the University of Bristol. She has also studied early plant introductions from Turkey and the Levant. E-mail: Alisonjrjix@aol.com.
- Kiri Ross-Jones is Archivist and Records Manager in the Library, Art and Archives department at the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew. E-mail: k.ross-jones@kew.org
- Tony Schilling was for many years head of Wakehurst Place. He has also spent some years in Nepal on botanical expeditions, and helped to establish the National Botanic garden at Godavari in Nepal. Address: Dogwood, The Braes, Ullapool, Wester Ross IV26 2SZ.
- Kit Strange is in charge of growing many of the hardy bulbous plants at Kew. She has travelled recently to Turkey, Central Asia and the Falkland Is. E-mail: k.strange@kew.org
- Rosemary Wise is a botanical artist who teaches in Oxford and is associated with the department of Plant Sciences at the University. E-mail: rosemary.wise@plants.ox.ac.uk
- John R. I. Wood works at the Department of Plant Sciences in the University of Oxford. He is also an Honorary Research Associate of the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew. He has worked and collected plants in various tropical countries including Somalia, Yemen, Bhutan, Colombia and Bolivia, the last of which he has been associated with for almost twenty years. He is currently working on Convolvulus and Ipomoea worldwide but has long-standing interests in Strobilanthes and Salvia and the families Acanthaceae and Lamiaceae in general. E-mail: jriwood@hotmail.com
- Masumi Yamanaka is a botanical artist and teacher who works at Kew, and assists in the curation of the collection of original paintings for Curtis's Botanical Magazine. E-mail: masumi_yamanaka@btinternet.com